

A photograph of a brick house with a gabled roof. The main part of the house is made of red brick. There are two large, light-colored garage doors with four small square windows each. Above the garage doors is a small arched window with white shutters. The roof is covered in brown shingles. The sky is clear and blue.

How do I get started?

To get maximum mileage out of your garage, our design and organization experts suggest these steps for organizing your belongings:

Determine the Best Use Per Wall

Garage walls can be divided into Major or Minor Walls. Major and Minor storage walls are defined by the amount of space available to use for storage.

Major Wall: A Major storage wall accommodates storage from ceiling to floor and across the span of the wall, even when cars are parked in the garage. This is typically the wall in front of the vehicles. Since most of the wall is available for storage, items that are used regularly, such as trash cans, coolers or lawn care supplies, should be stored on a Major Wall.

Minor Wall: A Minor storage wall is a wall where storage space is limited, typically because you need to allow room for car doors opening and walkway space. The bottom half of a Minor Wall is not available for storage. A Minor Wall is a good place for seasonal items because they're not used as frequently. Items stored along Minor Walls might include gardening tools, bikes or ski equipment.
